The words of Patrick Henry are as full of truth naturalized citizens abroad as well as of Patrick Henry are as full of truth now as when the then impending revolution inspired them: "Gentlemen may cry peace! peace! but there is no peace!" Either by debate, by hallot, or by the sterner trial at arms, the continual eampaign of ideas is carried on, and battles no less real than the Marathons, and Agineourts, and Waterloos, and Gettysburgs of martial history, are lost and won, and the wounds which are unseen are borne by many a reticent warrior, unconscious perhaps of cent warrior, unconscious perhaps of the hands that dealt him the blow. There is no less of the heroic, the self denying, the patriotic, the nathetic, and the sacrificial in these great moral battles which are continually being fought, than have been so well known fought, than have been so well known and the increased, but never, we fought, than have been so well known for the figure at which it is peculiary and the increased, but never, we believe, to the figure at which it now in the figure at which it now is a superstant of the figure at which it is peculiary superstant of the figure at which it is peculiary at the figure of the figure at which it is peculiary at the figure at the Uteras, and Johnson, Chatterton, Hutton, Wharton, Emerson, Simpson, Britton, All son, places of Deblity peculiar to fee under the Uteras, and Johnson, Chatterton, Hutton, Wharton, Emerson, Simpson, Britton, All son, places of Deblity of the whole system. The present year is to be a year of battles here. The war which has not ceased to call for MEN since Jefferson declared that he trembled for his country when he remembered that God is just, still demands men and action. It is the same old fight for the possession of the ground upon which wrongs may be righted, and hope delivered over to the cause of the best. No man needs to hesitate as to the place he shall take in the conflicts of the present time, or of any time. The touchstone of all causes is the question, "Is this the best for mankind?" It is only when we narrow our sympathies down to the comparatively few of our party, or tribe, or our color, that we hesitate, waver, by recognizing these obligations in politics,'in morals, and in the general action of life can a man fulfil his duty to his fellows, and merit final applause.

We suppose that experience, which is said to be the best teacher, would have shown Congress that the present extraordinary tax on whiskey was worse than useless, but we see it stated that ha the revision of the revenue system the tax of two dollars per gallon has been continued. If this high tax was intended as a revenge upon whiskey it would seem to have some reason upon its side? but it should be remembered that whiskey as an article of commerce is subject to the same general laws as other commodities, without regard to the merits or demerits of the a ticle itself, and that, as in the case of any other article for which there is a demand, if put by any means far beyond its mercantile value and wrong. The obligations of men in the place where it is demanded, are to men, and not to classes, and only methods will be resorted to for evading the really unjust price.

Flour. The Market for Flour has not varried naterially the past week. Low and medium grades are selling at rather easier prices, but for all choice and well known family brands the market is gradually advancing, with reduced stocks and light receipts. The sales have been at 2 to 2 75 for Western superfine; 12 to 11 for common extras ; 11 to 12 for medium extras and good bakers' brands.

Grain. The market for Corn has been quite moderate demand for Pork, and prices tensing the same as previously noticed. The sales have been at 23 to 24 for prime; 28 50 to 29 for mess; and 30 to 32 for clear and extra clear. Beef re-

DIED,

In Pairfield, May 7th, of congestion of te brain, Paul Nelson, youngest son of John and Ann Gover, aged 8 years and 10 months.

Our happy home seems dark and cold, By love and joy once lighted. A lamb has wandered from the fold. A bud of hope is blighted. Four little branches lovingly Entwined the parent tree, Four children bounded in from play; They come again but three 3

They wander idly from the house, It is so lonely now; They find no flowers in their sports, They have no playmate now.

O, where is he, the absent one,
Where is our child to-day?
Is he in yonder grave-yard lone, Or is he far away?

Or is he near, still loving us, And hearing at we say, Still conscious of our love for him, Happier than we to-day? This sweet to feel he may be near, Still hovering by my side; Those soft, dark eyes beholding me, So late a mother's pride.

We know he was a noble boy, A good obedient child, Affectionate and generous, With falsehood undefiled. A parents love may often see An angel by the hearth, But we did not think our gentle boy Was not a child of earth.

A Father's love to us reveals All that we need to know, Concerning those in childhood Called home from sin and woe. He knows the painful yearnings That must our bosoms swell, Answers our sad hearts question,
"Is it well with thy child? It is well.
